

Career: My Ph.D and me

Length :	3 days
Venue :	Your facilities/Online
Calendar :	tba
Group size :	From 5 to 15 persons
Audience :	Ph.D students
Trainers :	Marine Pansu, Aneline Dolet, Laurence Moss

This course offers participants a global approach to job hunting. Doctoral students are at the heart of the process, taking a professional look at the business world (public and private) and its contingencies.

The module valorizes the thesis as a professional experience and demonstrates the wealth of skills acquired by doctoral students.

Prerequisite

In order to personalize the module as much as possible, trainees are invited to bring all the documents they have (resume, covering letters, etc.).

Overall pedagogical objectives

Define your goals: get to know yourself and draw up a career plan

Specific pedagogical objectives

- Define your status
- Determine your company's needs
- Establish effective proposal strategies
- Personalized resume and cover letter
- Job-hunting process over time (professional watch)

Training method

Interactive training with numerous group and individual exercises and real-life situations.

Programme

- Skills assessment and job definition
- Classified ads and unsolicited applications
- Recruitment file (resume, cover letter, networking)
- Time management
- The recruitment interview (preparation, simulation)

This training is held in English and French.